As many companies are starting to feel the pinch of the current economic downturn, there is certainly some pressure for the corporate management to deliver the expected profit return, or at the very least, to show some expense reductions as part of the company cost cutting exercise. Undoubtedly, legal outsourcing has been increasingly seen as a way to reduce costs and increase efficiency without compromising the quality and expertise, which in return enable the management to focus more on the company core competency and operational excellence for achieving a higher growth and profitability.

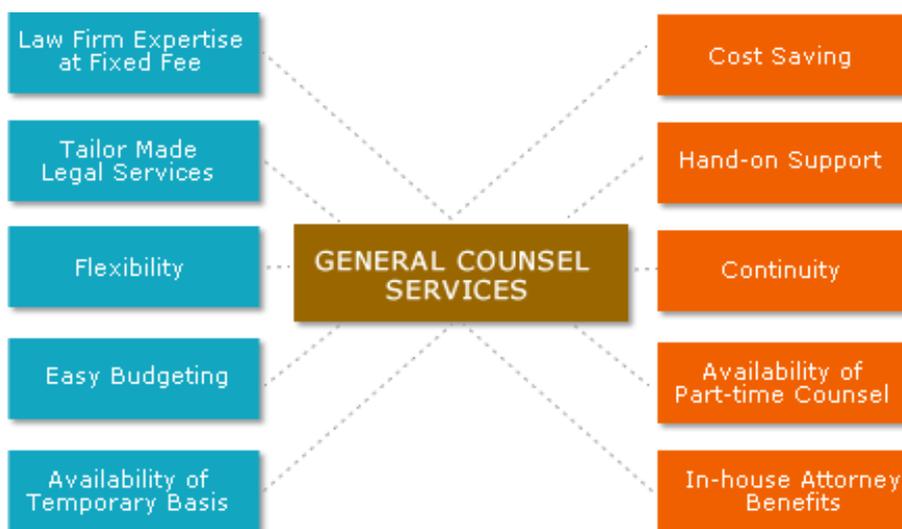

NARIT & Associates affords corporate clients the opportunity to be benefited from this legal outsourcing scheme at cost saving, fixed rate through our General Counsel Services. In engaging our General Counsel Services, companies need not to worry about the high rising salary and overhead costs associated with the hiring in-house associate, as well as the severance payment or unattended legal inquiry due to employee leaves.

Our General Counsel Services is a unique outsourced in-house general counsel legal services, in which for a monthly fixed retainer fee, we provide corporate clients with the legal services that are traditionally rendered by the in-house legal counsels.

The General Counsel Services brings the best of both worlds together, namely all the benefits and comfort of having in-house legal counsel as well as the outsourcing flexibility and expertise of outside international law firms. The access to outsourced in-house legal counsel on a retainer basis also encourages the companies to seek legal advice earlier not later in circumstances that they otherwise would not do so. Hence, the early consultation with our attorneys through our General Counsel Services could prevent companies from running into foreseeable problems.

With these benefits in mind, our General Counsel Services could be just what the management looks for as part of its strategic solutions.
